Episode 4: Departure

BrokenSea presents a sequel to the classic British TV series based on the acclaimed graphic novel

Once upon a time . . .

There was a magical place called the Village whose citizens were never allowed to leave. It was built by Number One to keep everyone protected or punished (nobody was ever quite sure). The leader of the Village was Number Two who liked to change his face on a regular basis. He also liked secrets very much. He kept things running efficiently so he could know everything about everyone.

Then one day a new citizen arrived. He was called Number Six but he didn't like that name. He also didn't like living in the Village. He just wanted to be left alone. But Number Two couldn't allow that. Not with all those precious secrets (which were the best ones ever). So he made Number Six play a game called "cat and mouse". He forced him to play it again and again.

Until one day Number Six destroyed the power of the Village and everyone went away to live happily after.

Or so we all believed.
